Pardon his French

Ford wants to cut councillors' office budgets to $30,000 and eliminate perks ● Budgets now sit at $50,445

Coun. Adam Giambrone continued taking private French lessons at taxpayers' expense months after announcing he is quitting municipal politics.

Councillors' office expenses for the first nine months of 2010 show that Giambrone submitted a Feb. 26 bill from Alliance Française school for $2,299.50, and, another dated June 4, for another $2,299.50.

Giambrone (Ward 18, Davenport) quit his short-lived mayoral campaign in February and announced on April 12 he would not seek re-election to council.

Although Giambrone's seat was won by Ana Bailão in the Oct. 25 election, he officially remains in office until Nov. 30. The TTC chair, an archaeologist by trade, said in April he planned to take a breather from public office and return in two or three years to run provincially or federally.

Hey, big (and small) spenders

- Biggest spender Sandra Bussin, defeated in last week's election, had spent $42,832.65 of her $46,241.23 annual allowance (pro-rated for the shortened year)
- Smallest spender Rob Ford — who campaigned for mayor on a message of deep spending cuts at city hall — listed $65.79 in expenses, which he reimbursed out of his own pocket.
- 'Gravy train'? Retiring Coun. Kyle Rae spent $12,000 on a farewell party for himself at a posh restaurant — an expenditure that Ford held up as an example of the "gravy train" at city hall.

Giambrone started French lessons in 2008, spending $4,000 and the $2,299.50 the following year. He rebutted criticism by noting he's Toronto's representative to an association of French municipalities in Ontario, and does interviews with Francophone media.

Doug Holyday, an ally of mayor-elect Rob Ford and longtime critic of the office budget spending, said Giambrone never should have expensed French lessons, but especially not after he knew any value to taxpayers would soon be lost.

"Certainly he's being totally unfair and I'm sure he's aware of it," said Holyday (Ward 3, Etobicoke Centre).

Giambrone has not replied to the Toronto Star's requests for comment.

Food no safer than before: Union

The union representing federal food inspectors says Canadians aren't any safer now than they were during the deadly listeriosis outbreak two years ago.

They say that's because the Conservative government still hasn't implemented all 57 recommendations made by an independent investigator.

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency says it will report back next September on how it has adopted the recommendations.

Chief among the union's concerns is what it says is a lack of inspectors working in non-slaughter meat plants.

The union says there are fewer inspectors working in meat plants now than before the listeriosis outbreak. But the CFIA says that's not the case and, in fact, there are more inspection staff than ever.

The CFIA says it is adding 170 inspectors to its staff, and 150 of them are already hired.

But union head Bob Kingston says Canadians are still at risk.

"Effectively, this means that consumers are eating high-risk, 'ready-to-eat' foods that may not have been adequately inspected, produced in factories that may or may not be meeting safety requirements," he said.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Probes

The tainted-meat scandal set off a flurry of probes.

- The most high profile probe was an arm's-length investigation by former Edmonton health chief Sheila Weatherill. Her team spoke to more than 100 people and amassed five million pages of information and still couldn't answer every question, such as how many meat inspectors there are in Canada.
- Twenty-three people died and many more got sick after eating meat traced to a Maple Leaf Foods plant near Toronto.
- The outbreak prompted the federal government to strengthen its food-safety protocols. It's now mandatory for companies to report all positive listeria findings to the food inspection agency.

Third incident strikes missing teen's family

Daughter vanished September 2009 Son ran away overnight

The father of missing Toronto teen Mariam Makhniashvili is facing an attempted murder charge after a couple was stabbed at Greenwood Avenue at Queen Street in the city's east end.

Vakhtang Makhniashvili, 50, turned himself in to police Thursday after the couple suffered what police called serious but non-life-threatening injuries.

Police say the man was stabbed in the abdomen and required surgery.

Victor Su, a local business owner, said he heard screaming, called 911, and ran out to see a woman in a bathrobe covered in blood screaming for help. He said it appeared the woman was bleeding from her arm.

The front steps of the victims' house were splattered with blood and a trail of blood could be seen running down the sidewalk past the next home.

"She was hysterical. She was up and down the street screaming. It was terrifying."
A NEIGHBOUR WHO IDENTIFIED HERSELF AS EUNA

Neighbours identified the couple as David and Delores Langer, who posted bail for Makhniashvili earlier this year after he was charged with stabbing a neighbour.

The couple did not know Makhniashvili before that incident, and pulled their bail promise after Makhniashvili told local media he was suspicious of the motives of Langer, who is a private detective.

The Langers have said they were only trying to help and felt hurt by his suspicions.

Racist costume a 'Halloween mistake': Ex-cop

Former Toronto police officer of the year says co-workers are asking him what he was thinking

A former police officer who donned blackface for a Halloween party and was led around on a rope by a friend dressed as a Ku Klux Klansman says it was a stupid mistake.

Terry Nunn, who was Toronto's police officer of the year in 1981, said Thursday he is in "no way, shape or form" a racist and neither is his friend Blair Crowley.

"I don't believe in the KKK. It was a Halloween mistake is what it was," he told Toronto radio station AM640.

The two won a prize for most original costume at the Royal Canadian Legion party in Campbellford, Ont., Saturday night. The party was open to the public and neither man is a legion member.

"I'm totally embarrassed. It's affected my private life. Obviously, it's affected the town, and the mayor (of Trent Hills) is ticked off about it."
TERRY NUNN

But what was supposed to be a night of fun to celebrate Halloween has turned into a nightmare of controversy for the pair.

"Blair admits it was in bad taste and he should have thought more about it before he did it," his wife Marsha Crowley said from their home in Hastings on Thursday.

Both she and Nunn said no one at the party complained about the costumes. But she admitted not a lot of thought went into the getups.

"It was just a last-minute 'Well, what am I going to wear? There's a bedsheet. Well I'm not going as a ghost.' And we had a piece of bristol board and kind of rolled it up and that was his costume," said Crowley.

Her husband also wore a Confederate flag on his back.

Toronto posts large budget surplus of $275M

This is 2nd year city has posted big year-end surplus, which is money left over in departmental budgets

The City of Toronto has built up a financial cushion of $275 million that can be used to help balance the 2011 operating budget, Mayor David Miller announced Thursday.

"The outgoing administration has handed the incoming administration a big gift," said Coun. Joe Mihevc, a member of Miller's budget team.

When the $9.2-billion operating budget for this year was approved last spring, councillors were told to expect a $503-million opening shortfall in 2011 that would have to be whittled down to zero.

The announcement of a big surplus makes that job easier, leaving about $228 million to be found, Mihevc said.

BERNARD WEIL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ Mayor David Miller

"It will still require a lot of work to balance the books, but the city's moving in the right direction," he said.

The city had a $276-million surplus at the end of 2009, which helped to balance the books along with a 2.9 per cent increase in residential property taxes.

In previous years, the surplus has come in at less than $100 million.

"Certainly any surplus is good news, but you have to wonder, where is this money coming from and why didn't we know about it before?" said Coun. Doug Holyday.

"It always seem to me these rabbits are coming out of hats. I don't understand how we can be running the city properly with so much information not coming out in a timely way." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Pit bull must be put down, court rules

Ontario's highest court has reinstated a death sentence for Ginger the pit bull.

Ginger was involved in a fight with a dog named Buddy in east-end Toronto in November 2005 that left both dogs and Buddy's owner with injuries.

The City of Toronto was granted an application to have Ginger destroyed under the Dog Owners' Liability Act in 2007, but Ginger's owner won an appeal. The Crown took the case to the Court of Appeal for Ontario, which ruled Thursday to reinstate the order to destroy Ginger. THE CANADIAN PRESS

G20 SUMMIT SECURITY

"WE'RE STAGGERING TO UNDERSTAND"

Toronto's police chief says he expects to come in under budget on his portion of security for the G20 Summit, but that doesn't impress some MPs still stunned by the size of that budget.

Bill Blair told a House of Commons committee Thursday that he budgeted $124.8 million to keep Toronto streets safe during the June summit. A big portion of that was to fly in, accommodate and pay about 2,000 cops from across the country.

The hefty tab does not include policing by the Ontario Provincial Police and the RCMP, which had even higher costs.

Overall, the G20 in Toronto and the G8 in Huntsville are estimated to have cost about $1.3 billion.

"We're reeling, we're staggering to understand how you can spend that amount of money," said New Democrat MP Pat Martin. THE CANADIAN PRESS

REMEMBRANCE DAY

MPP pushes for holiday

A Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature is calling for Remembrance Day to be made a statutory holiday in the province.

Nepean-Carleton member Lisa MacLeod says making Nov. 11 a statutory holiday would recognize the sacrifices of those who have given their lives in military service. Ontario is one of the few provinces and territories that doesn't recognize Remembrance Day as a statutory holiday.

NDP leader Andrea Horwath says her party has consulted with the Canadian Legion in Ontario and the veterans' group is opposed to making Nov. 11 a statutory holiday.

"They think it's important to have particularly young people in school to observe Remembrance Day on Nov. 11," Horwath said.

Two sought in assault

Police are searching for two men after a 13-year-old girl was reportedly forced into a car and assaulted.

According to police, the victim was walking near McLevin Avenue and Neilson Road on Oct. 27 when two men in a dark blue Honda approached her. Police say the victim was pulled into the car, sexually assaulted and then pushed out. One man is described as 25 years old, five-foot-two with a chubby build and weighing 180-200 lbs.

He has curly black hair, brown skin and a round face with a silver bar piercing on the left ear.

The second suspect is also 25 years old with a similar type of piercing. Police say the man has a slimmer build and stands at five-foot-five with spiky black hair, brown skin, green eyes and a small goatee.

McGuinty unveils funding for foreign students as way of increasing profile of Ontario universities

The governing Ontario Liberals should rethink a $30-million plan aimed at luring foreign students to Ontario universities when so many home-grown students are struggling to put themselves though school, opposition leaders said Thursday.

Foreign students are welcome to study in Ontario, but not on the taxpayers' dime, said Opposition Leader Tim Hudak.

"To see $40,000 a year in scholarships go to foreign students when Ontario families are trying to scratch together enough money to send their kids to college or university — it's wrong," he said.

Premier Dalton McGuinty announced the PhD scholarship program Thursday in Hong Kong while wrapping up an official visit to China.

It will provide 75 top foreign students with $40,000 a year for up to four years.

The Liberals hope the move will boost the profile of Ontario universities abroad as part of a larger economic plan outlined last spring that will see them into next fall's election. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa plans to get tougher on sex offenders

- Former NHLer Sheldon Kennedy applauds move
- Kennedy among those abused by Graham James

Mandatory sentences instead of house arrest for luring a child are among the penalties sex predators would face under proposed Conservative government legislation.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson laid out the details of the bill in Toronto Thursday.

The bill, tabled in Ottawa, would establish mandatory prison sentences for seven existing Criminal Code offences, including sexual assault and aggravated assault.

Conditional sentences such as house arrest would no longer be available.

"It will ensure that child sexual offenders receive sentences that better reflect the seriousness of their crimes," said Nicholson.

FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The government also wants to increase mandatory prison sentences for some sexual offences, as well as create two new offences to prevent child exploitation.

The new offences would make it illegal for anyone to provide sexually explicit material to a child for the purpose of committing a sexual offence, also known as "grooming."

"They close off loopholes that exist within the Criminal Code," said Nicholson.

It would also make it illegal for two adults to communicate through the Internet to make an arrangement to commit a sexual offence against a child.

Canada 8th in quality of life rankings

Canada is freezing its foreign-aid budget next year, for foreseeable future as a deficit-fighting measure

Canada dropped to eighth place Thursday in a UN index that measures quality of life in countries around the world.

That follows Canada's fourth-place showing in the 2009 UN Human Development Index. Norway tops this year's quality-of-life list, as it has for much of the last decade.

The report notes that many poorer countries have made great gains in health and education despite only modest growth in national incomes. "The message for a country like Canada is that aid programs targeted to economic growth are, of course, very necessary," said David Morrison, executive secretary of the United Nations Capital Development Fund. THE CANADIAN PRESS

No major change

- Canada routinely led the list in the 1990s, when the UN first started compiling the index of living standards, giving prime ministers bragging rights about the country.
- But development experts caution there is absolutely no statistical significance to shifts in the top 15 or 20 countries on the index, given their relative wealth.
- "This year's eighth isn't comparable to last year's fourth, and down to first," said Morrison.

Face veil attack nets suspended sentence

A Paris court handed a French retiree a one-month suspended sentence Thursday for attacking a Middle Eastern woman who was wearing a face-covering Muslim veil.

The court also ordered Jeanne Ruby, a retired English teacher, to pay 800 euro ($1,140 US) in damages to the victim, a citizen of the United Arab Emirates who was on holiday in Paris when the February incident took place.

Ruby had been charged with "aggravated violence" for scratching, biting and slapping the woman and snatching her veil off. The prosecutor in the case had asked Ruby be given a two-month suspended sentence. In a recent interview with Le Parisien newspaper, Ruby compared the niqab to a "muzzle" and said she didn't mean to harm the woman, but just wanted to pull the veil off. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sexual orientation on student survey

A survey by the Ottawa-Carleton Public School Board will ask Grade 7 to 12 students about their sexual orientation.

There are nine options to choose from, including "prefer not to disclose."

43 It's one of 43 questions on the confidential, voluntary survey that will be conducted between Nov. 22 and Dec. 10.

Other questions include languages spoken at home, plans to graduate from high school and parents' employment status.

Board staff have said the purpose of the survey is to gather demographic information for planning purposes. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Top Tory drops a bombshell: he's quitting

Jim Prentice scores major job at one of Canada's big banks Harper says he earned his 'highest respect'

Prime Minister Stephen Harper's environment minister is quitting politics to take a job in the private sector.

Jim Prentice made the surprise announcement in the House of Commons, where he said he has accepted a job as a vice-chairman of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Prentice has frequently been mentioned among the possible candidates who could succeed Harper as Conservative leader.

Harper told the Commons that Prentice has earned the "highest respect" of not just the prime minister, but of the entire House.

The Harper government has hitched its policy on reducing greenhouse gas emissions to that of Washington, arguing a continental approach is required given the two countries' tight trading relationship.

But after this week's U.S. midterm elections in which Republicans took control of the House of Representatives, any expectation of American movement on greenhouse gas regulations has been all but eliminated for the next two years.

SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

That left Prentice in charge of a ministry whose biggest file has effectively been shelved.

Privately, Prentice has been telling people he hasn't been expecting to be very busy for the next two years.

He may have also wanted to avoid yet another drubbing at an international climate conference.

Prentice and the rest of the Harper government took a lot of heat at last year's summit in Copenhagen, collecting several "Fossil of the Day" awards from environmental groups.

Prentice's resignation removes a recognized "Red Tory" from a governing caucus dominated by the old Reform party wing of the combined Conservative party.

The native of South Porcupine, Ont., represents a riding in Calgary, where he previously worked as a lawyer specializing in property rights and environmental issues for development projects.

He was first elected to the Commons in 2004

World's largest jet in midair scare

Qantas grounded its Airbus A380 fleet after one of the superjumbo jets blew out an engine Thursday, shooting flames and raining large metal chunks before making a safe emergency landing in Singapore with 459 people aboard. It was the most serious midair incident involving the double-decker A380, the world's largest and latest airliner, since its debut in October 2007.

Ship's crew in limbo

Ocean veteran

- The ice-strengthened Lyubov Orlova has voyaged to the Arctic and the Antarctic, South Georgia and the Falkland Islands.
- It offers 59 outside cabins, a spacious dining room, lounge and bar, and ship-to-shore communications via satellite, according to Internet travel websites.
- The 295-foot cruise ship was built in 1976.

Workers aboard a popular polar cruise ship have been stranded for almost six weeks since the vessel was seized in St. John's, N.L.

The International Transport Workers Federation says the Russian owner of the ship owes $340,000 in wages to 52 crew members, most of whom are Russian.

Workers are to be paid as part of ongoing negotiations to sell the vessel, Lyubov Orlova, to a Norwegian company.

Canadian authorities seized the ship on Sept. 25 as part of a separate legal action launched by Cruise North Expeditions.

Union spokesperson Gerard Bradbury says some of the crew members haven't been paid since April, others since June.

Dad's Army? Old white men defeated Obama

But was it just a last gasp? Democrats were the party of choice for women, young people, Hispanics

WIN MCNAMEE/GETTY IMAGES

Concern over the economy and health care reform spurred old white men into pushing the Republican tide that washed over Capitol Hill, experts say.

U.S. Republican legislators on the march to Capitol Hill? Blame old white men.

They gave the Grand Old Party a giant boost in mid-term congressional elections Tuesday, pushing aside President Barack Obama's Democrats.

Exit polling revealed that almost 25 per cent of the electorate was aged 65 and up, most of them white males. Only 11 per cent of voters surveyed were aged 18 to 29.

"It's just the frenzied, desperate last gasp of a bunch of privileged white people trying to hold on to their power," said Democrat Kate Hamill, 27.

"They'd love to take this country back to the halcyon days of the 1950s — a wonderful time in America, unless you were black, or gay, or a woman."

Generous lotto winners cause media stir

Over 70 churches, cemeteries, hospitals, fire departments and other charities got portion of winnings

Allen and Violet Large can't quite understand all the fuss over their decision to give away the lion's share of their whopping $11.2-million lottery win.

The elderly Nova Scotia couple says they managed to get by in their 147-year-old house with their prized 1987 Dodge Diplomat for many decades before striking it rich in a Lotto 649 draw last July.

But since it was revealed late Wednesday that they had handed out all of the winnings — minus about two per cent tucked away for themselves — media outlets had been calling non-stop before they took the phone off the hook.

"We didn't do this to get recognition. We did this because we wanted to ... We're just country hicks."
VIOLET LARGE

"We're overwhelmed with everything," Violet said in the couple's living room in Lower Truro, N.S.

The phone started ringing early Thursday, with reporters asking over and over again what would possess the 75-year-old retired welder and his wife to relinquish such a sizable jackpot. Television camera crews filed into their tiny white house.

Violet, who finished chemotherapy treatment for ovarian cancer just a week ago, and her husband of 36 years patiently explained why it is they doled out their millions to various charities.

All of their 15 family members were the first get equal portions of the winnings.

"Everybody can't understand why — everybody says, 'Why didn't you keep it?' ... But we didn't need this big amount," Allen Large said. "We were sitting quite well before we ever won this money. We weren't millionaires, but we were well to do."

Unpopularity behind resignation: Campbell

‘Scramble’ off U.A.E. military base wraps up

Nation kicked Canada off Camp Mirage — a main logistics hub for troops in Afghanistan

FRED CHARTRAND/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Walter Natynczyk

The Canadian military has officially left its once-secret base in the United Arab Emirates.

Operations at Camp Mirage were wrapped up following a ceremony on Wednesday that was closed to the media.

A dispute between Ottawa and the U.A.E. over airline landing rights in Canada resulted in the military being kicked off the base.

Camp Mirage had served as the main logistics hub for Canadian Forces in Afghanistan.

It was a hectic month for military planners after the U.A.E. government served notice in October that Canada would have to clear out, said Chief of Defence Staff Gen. Walter Natynczyk.

“It was a scramble,” he said Thursday during a visit to Kandahar Airfield. “We had to move a lot of equipment over a month’s period of time.”

He says the military is now using a base in Germany and is working on a memorandum of understanding with another country, which he declined to name.

“We’re able to work now using other areas that we had started laying the groundwork for years ago,” Natynczyk said.

There are 2,800 Canadian troops currently based in Afghanistan.

They are slated to begin returning home in July 2011.

Lake honour cheap, soldier's father says

Five lakes named after soldiers killed in Afghanistan
One dad says NHL star shouldn't get same recognition

Manitoba has named five lakes after soldiers killed in Afghanistan, but one man's father says standing in line behind an NHL hockey player takes the lustre off the honour.

Raymond Arnal thanked the province Thursday after a ceremony at the legislature naming the lake after his son, Cpl. James Arnal, who was killed in 2008.

But he said the fact that NHL star Jonathan Toews had one named after him this past summer takes away some of the significance.

"On the one hand, I'd like to say how appreciative I am that the government is honouring the memory of my son James and others in such a special ceremony," Arnal read from a brief statement after the ceremony.

▶ Raymond Arnal, the father of Cpl. James Arnal, makes a statement Thursday after a lake-naming ceremony in Winnipeg.

"Knowing that his supreme sacrifice has now been recognized and acknowledged by the Manitoba government gives me a great source of pride and joy."

But Arnal also said he had to voice his disappointment that Toews has had a lake named in his honour.

"Although he may be a super sports star he is not, in my humble opinion, a hero, at least not in the same category as the heroes we are honouring here today, and as such should not have been given the same recognition."
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hero status

Manitobans who die in war are entitled to have a geographic feature such as a lake or hill named after them, although there are no rules that say lakes must only be named only after fallen soldiers.

- The province has said no slight was intended by naming a lake after Toews, a Stanley Cup winner with the Chicago Blackhawks and Olympic gold medallist.
- The province has said it was trying to abide by rules set down by the Geographical Names Board of Canada, which say officials should wait at least three years before posthumously awarding geographic features.

▶ A man walks on a street Thursday covered with volcanic ash from the eruption of Mount Merapi in Muntilan, Indonesia.

Merapi death toll climbs to 44

With no winds early Thursday, white clouds from volcano fired a spectacular 6,000 metres into the sky

Eruptions at Indonesia's deadly volcano appeared to be intensifying Thursday as towering clouds of ash shot from the crater with a thunder-like roar, dusting towns up to 250 kilometres away and forcing motorists to switch on their headlights during the day. The death toll climbed to 44 — with six more deaths recorded in the last 24 hours — and the government repeated orders to airlines to stay clear of the unpredictable mountain.

Mount Merapi, which means "Fire Mountain," is one of the world's most active volcanoes. But even those who have dedicated a lifetime to studying it have been baffled by its erratic behaviour since its first Oct. 26 eruption, which has been followed by more than a dozen other powerful blasts and thousands of volcanic tremors. They had earlier hoped that it would result in a long, slow release of energy.

"But we have no idea what to expect now," said Surono, a state volcanologist, adding he has never seen the needle on Merapi's seismograph working with such intensity.

Islamic centre should be built: Former judge

Second World War vet compares mosque criticism to how he first felt seeing Japanese tourists at Pearl Harbor

MARK WILSON/GETTY IMAGES

▶ John Paul Stevens

Retired U.S. Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens said Thursday that Americans should be tolerant of plans to build an Islamic centre and mosque near the site of the World Trade Center in New York.

The 90-year-old Stevens said it is wrong to lump all Muslims with the terrorists who carried out the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks against the United States that killed 3,000 people.

"Guilt by association is unfair," he told a Japanese-American group in Washington.

The centre's location two blocks north of where the Twin Towers once stood has upset some relatives of Sept. 11 victims and stirred nationwide debate and angry demands that it be moved.

Critics say the site of mass murder by Islamic extremists is no place for an Islamic institution, while supporters of the centre say religious freedom should be protected.

"We should never pass judgment on barrels and barrels of apples just because one of them may be rotten," said Stevens, who left the court in June.

He said a nation built by people who fled religious persecution "should understand why American Muslims should enjoy the freedom to build their places of worship wherever permitted by local zoning laws."

Foreigners on doomed Cuba flight

A Cuban airliner flying from the eastern city of Santiago de Cuba to the capital crashed Thursday night with 68 people aboard, including 28 foreigners, state media reported. There was no immediate word on whether any survived.

The AeroCaribbean plane went down near the village of Guasimal in Santi Spiritus province, carrying 61 passengers and a crew of seven, state television said.

It said 28 passengers were foreigners, but did not give a breakdown of nationalities.

The flight would have been one of the last leaving Santiago de Cuba for Havana ahead of Tropical Storm Tomas.

Debt fears overblown, report says

Fears about record high Canadian consumer debt may be overblown because Canadians are also beginning to save more and increasing their household wealth, says a Scotia Economics study released Thursday.

The Bank of Canada has estimated that Canadian debt-to-income ratios hover around 147 per cent. That means for every dollar earned, consumers owe $1.47.

However, household net worth, or assets minus liabilities, is still close to a record high, Scotiabank's chief economist Warren Jestin wrote in the report. That's because personal savings levels are increasing, house prices remain close to record highs and stock values have returned. But given the high unemployment rate and record debt levels, consumer borrowing will slow down in the year ahead and the odds of a full blown relapse into recession are relatively low, he added.

A strong housing market has been a main contributor to the highest domestic debt burdens in history. Ultra-low interest rates created an opportunity for many people to spend more than they can actually afford.

Loonie near parity as greenback in free fall

RYAN REMIORZ/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ The loonie came within 0.1 of a cent of hitting parity with the U.S. dollar Thursday before pulling back a bit.

Speed of ascent checked by fed's move to block bid for PotashCorp

The Canadian dollar made strong gains against the U.S. dollar Thursday as the latest dose of stimulus from the U.S. Federal Reserve weighed on the American currency.

The loonie came within 0.1 of a cent of hitting parity with the U.S. dollar earlier but later backed away from the highs. It closed up 0.44 of a cent to 99.76 cents US, marking the sixth straight day it has moved ahead.

The dollar briefly hit parity with the U.S. dollar Oct. 14, but hasn't closed above that level since April 23.

Investors were relieved at the Fed's decision Wednesday to buy the additional assets in a measure known as quantitative easing, which is aimed at creating more dollars and increasing the supply of money in the economy.

"By flooding the markets with U.S. dollars, the Fed is effectively and actively engaging in a currency devaluation program."
ANDREW BUSCH, CURRENCY STRATEGIST AT BMO CAPITAL MARKETS

But creating that extra money comes at a cost.

"With the Fed (quantitative easing) announcement, the greenback is in free fall with every major currency gaining ground against it," said Andrew Busch, Global Currency and Public Policy Strategist at BMO Capital Markets.

Nissan. Earnings

Nissan's quarterly profit surges

Nissan Motor Co.'s quarterly profit quadrupled as surging sales overcame the drag from a strong yen. Profit at the Japanese automaker totalled ¥101.73 billion ($1.26 billion US), up dramatically from ¥25.53 billion a year earlier. Sales grew 21.4 per cent to ¥2.269 trillion ($28 billion).

PotashCorp's shares dip after takeover foiled

Prime minister wants review of secretive manner in which foreign takeover bids evaluated and approved

Anglo-Australian miner BHP Billiton hasn't given up on its hostile takeover bid for fertilizer producer PotashCorp and will continue to talk with the federal government despite its rejection of the offer as not of net benefit to Canada.

BHP has until Dec. 3 to amend its bid before a final ruling on the transaction, but the Anglo-Australian miner could just walk away from the offer.

PotashCorp shares fell Thursday, but remained well above BHP's offer price of $130 US per share, which valued the company at nearly $40 billion US. The stock closed down $4.78 at $141.43 on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

UBS analyst Brian MacArthur lowered his price target on PotashCorp to $165 from $175 after the government's decision to block BHP's bid for PotashCorp, but maintained his "buy" rating on the stock.

During debate Thursday on the motion, Industry Minister Tony Clement played down concerns that the 30-day comment period left the door open for the company to change its bid to make it more palatable to the government.

"Sometimes a cigar is just a cigar," Clement said of the 30-day wait.

Clement noted he was "quite anxious" to reveal the specific reasons why the deal would not be a net benefit to Canada, but said he was forbidden to do so before the period was over.

Reports suggested Russian company Phosagro was contemplating making a bid for PotashCorp and a Saskatchewan aboriginal group was trying to raise cash a bid of its own.

SANTA CLAUS IS DEAD THIS HOLIDAY SEASON

Other people's money

DAVID DESCÔTEAUX

This week, millions of Americans disgusted with politics demanded change. They voted for candidates who promised to reduce spending and force government to live within its means.

They voted for candidates who promised to reduce spending and force government to live within its means.

"Don't ask me how we're going to create jobs," said Rand Paul, a newly minted U.S. senator since Tuesday, before a Kentucky crowd last April. "It's you who will create jobs. If we get out of your way."

In Toronto, mayor-elect Rob Ford spent his career in city council denouncing his colleagues' spending and privileges. "Partying with taxpayer money is over," repeated the football coach during his campaign.

In England, David Cameron's new government is putting the state on a diet. He plans to eliminate 490,000 public jobs by 2015. A majority of the population supports him.

The era of bailiffs

Historically, politicians have always played Santa Claus, but those days are over, according to Éric Duhaime, co-founder of the Quebec Liberty Network, a grassroots movement that promotes greater freedom of choice and individual responsibility. "It's fun to play Santa, giving gifts and receiving thanks from everyone. But the kind of politician we need now, in Quebec and elsewhere, is a bailiff. Someone who will break down doors, twist arms, and go get the cheques."

This kind of work is less glamorous. Ribbon-cutting ceremonies on bright, sunny days will be rare. It's not surprising that fewer and fewer people want to go into politics, according to Duhaime. "Historically, politicians were used to hearing, 'Thank you so much, kind sir, thank you for giving us roads and arenas. Thanks for putting it on my children's credit cards.' Today, the credit cards are maxed out."

The task will be difficult and unpleasant, but the mission is noble: Serving the needs of the people instead of the whims of well-connected interest groups. Taxpayers have had it with seeing their money used to bail out millionaire bankers, launch wars or placate unions.

In New Jersey, Gov. Chris Christie is so popular that many see him running for the U.S. presidency one day. His message: Let's stop making short-term decisions that dig us ever deeper. "This year, many government employees will get an 11 per cent raise. It's going to cost New Jersey taxpayers $300 million, while thousands of these taxpayers just feel lucky to still have jobs. It's insane." Santa Claus is dead. And that's a good thing.

5 MINUTES WITH: PETER WYLDE

The legendary acting teacher, who counts everyone from Sandra Oh to Ted Dykstra amongst his graduates, has recently opened his own actors' studio in the trendy Distillery District, where he teaches his infamous Zone of Silence.

Can you explain the Zone of Silence and how it works?
The Zone of Silence is an improvisation exercise that is done in complete silence. There's no sound, no words, and it begins at absolute zero. We set up a place — a little coffee table, a few chairs, magazines. We call it the doctor's office because actors have to have something specific. So, it's a doctor's office. You're in a doctor's office. Waiting. But as you wait, you are sharply aware of the other people in the room. And that's all you have to do: Be there in that moment completely.

What's the purpose of that?
The purpose is to be where you are, and to be aware of the other people in the space where you are.

And what does this do for actors?
Everything. The whole point about it is that it's mindless. There is nothing for the brain to do. Acting does not come from the brain at all. We want to shove the brain out and immerse ourselves completely in the atmosphere, the moment.

Have the actors who have come through the Zone of Silence said to you after that it's helped them in their craft?
Of course. It's been for 25 years: "If only we could go back and do the Zone of Silence now!" And indeed, it reveals itself to be the whole foundation of acting. It's all about what is going on in the gut.

In all the travelling and teaching you've done around the world, what have you observed about Toronto actors?
They are reserved. They are inhibited. This exercise is precisely what they need to draw them out and to dare, to trust, to give and take. We do things here we would not dream of doing beyond that door.

Television and film seem to get more attention these days, but why do you think theatre is so important?
Why is life important? We are the only sentient, conscious animals that we know, that contemplate our own mortality. Given that, everything flows from it. We create art in order to make sense of the human condition.

Re: I looked at a girl ... and liked it (Nov. 2)

OTTAWA. I find Jessica Napier's immature comments to be deplorable. As a Canadian citizen, I should not have to be faced with such discriminating characterizations of my sexual preference. Let's reiterate — should a girl look at another girl and "want to get with her," there would not be anything creepy about it. Period. Having a same-sex crush on a close friend is also not "weird" — it's a wonderful compliment. Homosexuality is a perfectly natural sexual desire. To classify same-sex desire as being "creepy" or "weird" is absolutely wrong and disrespectful. MIKE ARTELLE

TORONTO. I went into reading (the column) with curiosity as I find the topic interesting, and think the subject of same-sex crushes, whether platonic or not, needs to get out there more to help those experiencing them to feel OK about it, but wound up disappointed. While it's fine to be clear about (a same-sex crush) not being a sexual feeling, is it necessary to imply that if it was a sexual feeling, it would be "creepy?" I find this offensive. Same-sex sexual attraction is not "creepy." It's totally normal and can even happen to people who label themselves heterosexual. JESSICA TAVARES

Metro Minute with pulmonary health

On the scale of public attention, our lungs often take a back seat to the overexposed Kardashian sisters of vital organs: The heart, brain and liver. (We'll let you decide which one is which). But that doesn't mean they are any less important than their flashier counterparts. Just try not breathing for a while and see what good they do you. That's why the Pulmonary Hypertension Association of Canada is holding a fundraiser tomorrow night to raise both funds and awareness for this rare disease, in which the arteries of the lungs become closed off and can be potentially fatal.

Monsters director is out to show how you can make a sci-fi blockbuster without breaking the bank ◆ Alien invasion flick being compared to District 9 ◆ Raises issues about American national security and border security issues

▶ Monsters is a sci-fi film about octopus-like aliens taking over Mexico.

Creating movie Monsters for less

STEVE GOW
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Filmmaker Gareth Edwards is as confused as anyone about why Hollywood's special effects blockbusters cost millions of dollars to make.

"I'd love for you to ask that same question to (Hollywood producers) and say, 'Why is it so expensive?'" said the Emmy-nominated visual effects prodigy-turned-director recently in Toronto. "Essentially it's a guy on a computer in a room doing it. Who's getting the $10 million?"

With his thriller Monsters, Edwards is defying convention with his own sci-fi blockbuster that features a Mexico overrun by enormous octopus-like aliens. Impressively slick, the first-time filmmaker has proven that you can craft incredible effects that don't rely on an Avatar-sized bankroll.

"I genuinely don't know (how much it cost)," admitted Edwards while insisting Internet rumors the price tag was as low as $15,000 US are false. "We all got paid a wage so there's no way it could've been done for that, but probably the budget could've been close to that in terms of what was spent on-screen. It was a very low budget."

Monsters isn't only attracting attention for its cost-effective effects however. Comparing the film to District 9, critics are taking note of the movie's political subtext regarding American security and border policies — a distinction Edwards quickly downplays.

"It's really much more a case (that) I wanted to do this monster movie but I wanted it to be real and so you pull from real world situations," said Edwards. "(But) there's a lot of little parallels in there and I'm very happy for them to be there because I didn't want to make a film that was (just) entertainment."

Editing woes

▶ Garth Edwards

Largely improvised, Monster director Garth Edwards had a difficult time distilling Monsters into a watchable movie:

Big cuts. "We had about a hundred hours worth of stuff and the first cut was over four hours," said Edwards. "We stuck a big sign over the edit saying '90 minutes' because ... about one and a half hours into any movie, no matter how good it is, I do that thing where I look at my watch."

But Williams, who is one-half of the genre-bending production duo The Neptunes and frontman for rap-rock trio N.E.R.D, said there's still so much more he wants to achieve.

"I'd love to work with Eminem. I'd love to do it," the 37-year-old Grammy winner said in a phone interview Tuesday from Seattle. "It just hasn't happened yet."

▶ Eric Balfour, right, stars in the action/sci-fi film Skyline.

Balfour finds time for the things he loves

Experienced, yet young, actor battles aliens in the disaster epic Skyline Six Feet Under star says effects laden film really about people banding together

CHRIS ALEXANDER
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Though his name my evade overuse in most domestic households, actor Eric Balfour's chiseled face has been on screens for over a decade.

The edgy performer, model and musician has been a presence in everything from HBO's hit TV show Six Feet Under, to the blockbuster (and bloody) 2004 remake of The Texas Chainsaw Massacre, to the current Stephen King series Haven. And yet mysteriously, Balfour has yet to break through to the mainstream.

The actor hopes to rectify that problem with his leading role in The Strause Brothers' big budget sci-fi shocker Skyline, a bizarre, FX driven global disaster epic that sees mankind falling prey to hordes of invading alien hypnotists.

The Strause Brothers, Colin and Greg, also directed AVPR: Alien vs. Predator — Requiem, and have done visual effects for more than 50 moves.

But while the visual razzle dazzle may be the hook, Balfour believes it's the human element that gives the picture its spine.

"There are wall to wall effects in this film," says Balfour.

"But it's really a much more intimate story, something that takes the scope of an epic genre movie and uses that to tell a story about a group of people in a survival situation."

Earlier this year Balfour also headlined Dinoshark, another genre potboiler with a considerably more — ahem — modest budget than that of Skyline's. But it gave Balfour the chance to work with a living legend, producer Roger Corman.

"Roger is iconic, I couldn't resist the chance to meet him," says Balfour of the near mythical mogul.

"Is Dinoshark the proudest moment of my career? No, not really. But we did things on that movie that I would never have gotten away with on a big Hollywood film. And to learn philosophies about filmmaking from Roger firsthand was incredible."

Whether or not Skyline pushes Balfour into the higher tier spotlight he so clearly belongs in, the tireless, always enthusiastic artist is keeping busy with a myriad of projects, including directing, writing and continuing with his other love, music.

"Look, when people in my world say they have no time to do the things they want to do, that's nonsense," he urges.

"If it's something you want to pursue or express, you gotta make the time. And I do. I always will."

Ralston proud of 127 Hours

PHIL BROWN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Following a successful film festival run, 127 Hours opens next Friday and is sure to be one of the most praised and discussed films of 2010.

The movie is based on the incredible true story of Aron Ralston, who was trapped in an isolated canyon and forced to amputate his own arm to survive.

The inspiring tale captured the public's imagination in 2003 and inevitably a film had to be made.

Fortunately Ralston was intimately involved, ensuring that the production accurately represented his experience.

Metro got a chance to speak with Ralston during an appearance at this year's TIFF where he excitedly discussed the long gestating project.

When asked if he ever imagined this film would be made, Ralston laughed,

"Definitely not. As I was amputating my arm, my only thought and that was, 'wow this is going to be an incredible story to tell my friends.' That was it," he said. "I didn't think that anyone outside of my circle that would even care."

Ralston struggled for years to produce a documentary, but when that proved difficult to finance he happily changed tracks to make a fictional version with Trainspotting director Danny Boyle.

"I love how Danny wanted to stay in the canyon and only show my perspective," explained Ralston.

"He presented the story in a very authentic manner so that it's always truthful even when it's not factual. I've seen it five times now and I still cry for the better part of the second half. I couldn't be happier."

REAL-LIFE SURVIVAL TALES ON THE BIG SCREEN

In Focus

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Wikipedia defines survival as "the struggle to remain alive and living." Next to that definition should be a picture of Aron Ralston, the poster boy for survival at any cost.

His name may not ring a bell, but his remarkable story will make you wonder how far you would go to stay alive. You see, Ralston is the American mountain climber who was trapped by a boulder for five days in May 2003 and was only able to free himself by amputating his own arm.

His story is told in unflinching detail in 127 Hours, starring James Franco. The film is so intense some audience members have suffered panic attacks and lightheadedness.

The same can't be said of Alive, the 1993 film about a Uruguayan rugby team stranded in the Andes, who, once their rations of wine and chocolate ran out, were forced to eat their deceased teammates to stay alive.

Based on real events, the facts of the story are gut wrenching, but as New Yorker critic Anthony Lane pointed out "most people know the story already; everyone began to titter with anticipation whenever one of the characters said he felt hungry."

The ghoulish humour some audiences found in the film's story of survival was echoed in Lane's review when he wrote that the film, "solemnly wring(s) a message of togetherness from the horror. Come closer to your friends than ever before, the movie says: have them for lunch."

Less known than Alive's cannibalistic rugby players but just as compelling is Touching the Void, another true-life endurance drama.

The movie's lesson? Never go mountain climbing.

Roger Ebert called the story of Joe Simpson's slow, painful climb from the bottom of a crevice to rescue "the most harrowing movie about mountain climbing I have seen, or can imagine."

Most of these movies have happy (or at least happy-ish) endings, but not all stories of survival end in triumph.

The anti-survival movie genre is alive and well, even if the characters usually aren't by the end of these films.

Into the Wild, the Oscar nominated story of an idealistic dreamer not up to the challenges of living on his own in the wilderness of Alaska and Open Water, the tale of a pair of swimmers who become shark bait, don't have the inspirational uplift of some of the other movies I've mentioned, but can be essays in courage (or stupidity, depending on your viewpoint).

▶ Touching the Void is a true-life story about a disastrous climb in the Andes mountains.

Movie review See it twice ●●●●● | See it now ●●●● | Worth watching ●●● | Yawn ●● | Don't bother ●

Great cast gives boost to weak script

Due Date
Genre: Comedy
Director: Todd Phillips
Stars: Robert Downey Jr., Zach Galifianakis, Danny McBride
●●●
If Robert Downey Jr. and Zach Galifianakis weren't arguably the two biggest stars in Hollywood right now, Due Date wouldn't exist. The script is clearly a generic road comedy about an expectant father and a wannabe actor racing to Los Angeles that never would have been produced without the two stars signing on.

Granted, they brought along The Hangover director Todd Phillips who clearly added some inspired gags and improv sessions (Galifianakis' pre-sleep ritual and Downey knocking out a kid are two of the biggest laughs in the movies this year), but the funniest moments all feel tacked onto a tired central structure that becomes tedious shortly after it begins.

The biggest problem is that the Phillips wanted to tug on his audience's heartstrings rather than just going for belly laughs. That's fine, but Phillips lacks Judd Apatow's touch with gentle drama, relying too often on the skill of his actors to get through wince-inducing monologues. Galifianakis and Downey Jr. are undeniably fantastic and almost elevate the project over a half-hearted remake Planes Trains And Automobiles, but not quite. Due Date is certainly funny and worth seeing, but just doesn't reach the comedic heights of The Hangover and that wasn't exactly a high bar to reach.
PHIL BROWN

Megamind
Genre: Animation
Director: Tom McGrath
Stars: Will Ferrell, Tina Fey
●●●½
With an assortment of pop culture references and some hilarious, clearly improvised voice work on behalf of its stars Will Ferrell and Tina Fey, Megamind is one of those rare family gems that win over both young and old.

The story of a bumbling but brilliant supervillian that reluctantly takes on the role of public defender after he regrettably defeats local hero Metro Man (Brad Pitt), Megamind may be a familiar premise, but director Tom McGrath (Madagascar) works the comedic elements smoothly and keeps the visuals exciting. He and the stellar voice cast are clearly having a good time and the energy rubs off

Fair Game
Genre: Drama
Director: Doug Limon
Stars: Sean Penn, Naomi Watts, Sam Shepard
●●½
Doug Limon (the man fired from The Bourne Identity series) almost returns to form with Fair Game, a political thriller about Joe and Valerie Plame Wilson. Valerie worked for the CIA before being ousted and ruined by the press after her husband Joe published an article in the New York Times deriding the fast-tracked Iraq War. Limon attempts to streamline the ugly truth into a tense thriller and while the pacing definitely works, too much detail has been sacrificed.
PHIL BROWN

A Drummer's Dream
Genre: Documentary
Director: John Walker
Stars: Nasyr Abdul Al-Khabyyr, Dennis Chambers
●●●
A Drummer's Dream is just that: a film sure to thrill anyone obsessed with the drums while flying over the heads of everyone else. The documentary captures a weeklong retreat that combined some extraordinary session drummers from around the world with a collection of talented students. Each of the musicians gets a chance to share their philosophies on drumming and life.
PHIL BROWN

For Colored Girls
Genre: Drama
Director: Tyler Perry
Stars: Thandie Newton, Janet Jackson, Whoopi Goldberg
●
Writer/director Tyler Perry returns for his eighth movie since 2007. Since he doesn't strap on a dress to play Madea that means it's one of his depressing dramas and this one is a doosey. Interweaving the stories of eight main characters, Perry ensures that every possible tragic cliché befalls the protagonists.
PHIL BROWN

Summerhood
Genre: Comedy
Director: Jacob Medjuk
Stars: John Cusack
●●
Jacob Medjuk's Summerhood may seem earnest but unless you perhaps went to the same summer camp the writer/director did, this comedy is as stunted as its pint-sized stars. Narrated by John Cusack, Summerhood flashbacks to a group of juvenile campers and the pranks, pratfalls and preteen crushes that occur over one specific summer in the 1980s.
STEVE GOW

Marwencol
Genre: Documentary
Director: Jeff Maimberg
Stars: Robert De Niro, Edward Norton, Mila Jovovich
●●●½
Truth is stranger and more moving than fiction in Jeff Maimberg's award-winning documentary Marwencol, which profiles an assault victim who has sublimated his mental trauma by creating a sprawling miniature town in his backyard. As a case study of the intricacy of mental disability, Marwencol is fascinating.
ADAM NAYMAN

Father of My Children
Genre: Drama
Director: Mia Hansen-Love
Stars: Chiara Caselli
●●●
Based on a true story, Father of My Children is as unsentimental as it is shocking. Impossible to fully explain without blowing a key twist, the film tells the story of a family that must deal with their loving father's actions when he goes bankrupt. The movie's tone and simplicity might be best summed up with the inclusion of the Doris Day song, Que Sera, Sera.
STEVE GOW

Strange Powers
Genre: Documentary
Directors: Kerthy Fix, Gail O'Hara
Stars: Stephin Merritt, Claudia Gonson
●●●
Strange Powers is about the charming curmudgeon Stephin Merritt and his band The Magnetic Fields. While Merritt's very guarded, there's something fascinating about how little he's willing to let the audience (or even his close friends) into his world. He makes for an intriguing, if frustrating, documentary subject.
PHIL BROWN

The Tempest
Genre: Drama
Director: Des McAnuff
Stars: Christopher Plummer, Julyana Soelistyo
●●●
Christopher Plummer is pure magnetism as Prospero in Des McAnuff's filmed adaptation of the Stratford Festival's production of The Tempest. It's hard to look away from the 80-year old actor, even with competition from 4'10" dynamo Soelistyo as Ariel. Shakespeare's tale of the Duke of Milan, living in exile with conjured creatures is complex and heartstopping.

Blair Underwood lands on alien territory

Known for his roles in the 'as-real-as-it-gets series,' actor Underwood boldly braves the world of sci-fi

On The Event, Blair Underwood plays newly sworn-in President Elias Martinez, who meets with crises he could never have imagined when he took office.

One problem he inherits is from out of this world: What to do about extraterrestrial aliens who crash-landed in Alaska in 1944. While an unknown number of them remain at large to this day, 97 are imprisoned as Top Secret detainees.

How would the American people react on learning of the aliens' existence? And do some of these creatures pose a threat to human life?

Such questions dog Martinez, who is just one of many characters in this multi-strand thriller.

Airing Mondays at 9 p.m. ET, The Event has the action-adventure rambunctiousness of 24 and a time-shifting narrative that smacks of Lost.

But Underwood recalls that, when he was first approached by its producers, "My major question was, 'How authentic do you see this show?' They said, 'We want to keep it as realistic as possible.'"

It figures Underwood would ask.

During a quarter-century of roles, the 46-year-old actor has tried to keep at least one foot on the ground with performances that feel real, going back to his breakout role as smooth but headstrong attorney Jonathan Rollins on L.A. Law. He subsequently starred on the medical dramaCity of Angels, joined the cast of Sex and the City its final season and set off sparks with Heather Locklear on their short-lived airport drama, LAX.

Whatever it is, Martinez seems to have it, even as, radiating dignity and leadership, he wrestles with a crisis he still can't fully grasp.

Most recently, he has focused on the mysterious disappearance of Sophia

Maguire (Innes), the leader of the detainees with whom Martinez had met to discuss their release.

Martinez was born in Miami to Cuban refugees, but his Afro-Cuban heritage is just one of many details that make up the character.

"Race comes into play in every aspect of life, whether we acknowledge it or not," he says.

"But the conscious effort I make as an actor is, 'Just let this man be a person."'

Underwood's interest in acting was triggered at an early age.

"I'd watch the kids on TV and think how cool that must be," he recalls. "I wanted to know, 'How do I get in that box like those other kids?"'

He studied musical theatre at Carnegie Mellon University, then, at 23, arrived on the red-hot L.A. Law as it began its second season in 1987.

"Most of us in life, especially in my industry, just want a shot," Underwood-says, "and when I got that opportunity, I wanted to make the most of it. I still carry that with me.

Duff's role earns props from pals

Hilary Duff says she scored some points with NHLer husband Mike Comrie by landing a guest spot on the subversive collegiate comedy Community.

"He was so excited when I told him I was doing the show," the former Disney teen queen said in a conference call this week. "So many guys in my life - like a lot of my guy friends - love the show, and I totally got respect for doing it.

"They're so used to me and everything that I do that they don't really care anymore - until I told them I was doing the show and they were like, 'No way! We DVR that at home! We love it, we've watched it since the beginning.'

"It was fun to get to see their reaction."

The 23-year-old Duff guest starred in last night's episode of the sophomore sitcom, which airs on NBC and Citytv.

She played the acid-tongued leader of a pack of mean girls making life miserable at Greendale, the show's hapless Colorado community college.

"It was fun for me to get to play a mean girl because it is so different from anything I've ever done before," Duff said. "Danny Pudi's character in the show really brings out her weakness, chinks in her armour, you know? And I thought that was really fun to play, to get to be tough, but you do see how weak she is inside."

Demi Lovato's mother and step-father aren't too pleased with her dad, Patrick Lovato, for talking to the press about his daughter's entering a treatment facility — especially since Patrick reportedly hasn't seen her in two years. "Unfortunately, several people have taken it upon themselves to speak out — both on and off the record — about a situation they know nothing about."

▶ Sweet potato chocolate cake packs a healthy punch.

Cake can be healthy too

This moist and scrumptious chocolate cake is infused with the goodness of sweet potato. It makes a uniquely delicious end to a special dinner and is a source of fibre and vitamin C.

Sweet Potato Chocolate Cake

Preparation:

1 Preheat oven to 180 C (350 F). Over a saucepan of boiling water, place frozen sweet potatoes in a steamer basket and steam for 12 minutes or until very tender. (Make sure there is a gap between the top of the water and the bottom of the steamer basket.) Place sweet potatoes in a large bowl and mash using a potato masher. Add chocolate and let stand for 2 minutes or until melted, then stir to combine. Let cool.

2 In another large bowl, beat butter and sugar until fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time, and beat in vanilla. Beat in sweet potato mixture.

3 In another bowl, whisk together flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Stir into chocolate mixture until combined. Scrape into parchment paper-lined 3-l (13-by-9-inch) baking pan and spread evenly in pan. Bake for about 25 minutes or until cake tester inserted in centre comes out clean.

4 Immediately after cake comes out of oven, sprinkle chocolate chips over top of cake and let stand for 2 minutes. Spread evenly, then sprinkle with toffee and pecans. Let cool. This recipe is good for 12 to 16 servings.

Portraits of a hidden history

Visitors to Washington's National Portrait Gallery can see exhibit on gays' impact on American art

When artist Jasper Johns was mourning the end of his relationship with Robert Rauschenberg, he took one of his famous flag paintings, made it black, and dangled a fork and spoon together from the top.

Hidden symbols in Johns' In Memory of My Feelings, tell part of story, curators said. Color from the relationship is gone. A fork and spoon elsewhere in the painting are separated. Here we have a coded glimpse into a six-year relationship that was rarely acknowledged, even in Rauschenber's 2008 obituary.

The Smithsonian's National Portrait Gallery is decoding such history from abstract paintings and portraits in the first major museum exhibit to show how sexual orientation and gender identity have shaped American art.

The installation, Hide/Seek: Difference and Desire in American Portraiture, opened Saturday and is on view through Feb. 13.

"There's been an entire history hiding in plain sight," said Portrait Gallery historian and curator David C. Ward. "Telling the history of art without the history of gay people is like telling the history of slavery without mentioning black people."

"Telling the history of art without the history of gay people is like telling the history of slavery without mentioning black people"
PORTRAIT GALLERY HISTORIAN AND CURATOR DAVID C. WARD

Many have avoided the subject, he said, out of politeness or homophobia.

Ward said he was surprised to discover more gays than suspected communists were fired from federal jobs during the Red Scare of the Cold War era. In that political climate, he said, many modern artists turned to abstraction and coded language to portray themselves and those they loved.

The exhibit, funded primarily with private donations, comes 20 years after the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington cancelled a retrospective of photographer Robert Mapplethorpe's homoerotic images for fear of a backlash from Capitol Hill.

The Smithsonian's exhibit is different, Ward said. Indeed, there are few pictures of men kissing, but curators carefully chose many of the 105 pieces for what is not obvious at first glance.

While the images are mostly tame, curators know such a show at the publicly funded Smithsonian Institution could draw scrutiny. Co-curator Jonathan Katz of the State University of New York at Buffalo said he tried for 15 years to mount a similar exhibit in New York City but found no takers.

"How did we get to a point where the banking world is more progressive than the museum world?" he said, noting many corporations already offer benefits to same-sex partners. "This was the last acceptable prejudice."

Will they Step up?

Here are some Leafs who will need to pick up the slack with captain Dion Phaneuf injured and out of the lineup for the next four to six weeks

1. FRANCOIS BEAUCHEMIN

The veteran will likely take Phaneuf's place on the power play.

He has a big shot — probably the next best among Leaf defencemen to Phaneuf's — and the club may look to utilize it more with the man advantage.

Beauchemin has 25 shots and one goal on the power play. Phaneuf was far and away the Leafs' leader among defenceman with 37 shots (and second on the team to Phil Kessel's 39 shots).

The Leafs are going to need Beauchemin to tee up his shot on the power play and take more shots in general to pick up the slack left by Phaneuf.

2. MIKE KOMISAREK

Big No. 8 showed a bit in the Washington game of the kind of play he will have to do now that Phaneuf is down. And that's taking the body.

Komisarek is more than capable of being a physical presence, but it's also likely he is hurting every time he lands a good check.

He underwent season-ending shoulder surgery last spring and even though he's recovered and playing more than 21 minutes a game now, that shoulder must still hurt when he comes into contact with another player.

It's asking a lot, but Komisarek needs to answer the bell physically.

3. TOP LINE (BOZAK, KESSEL, VERSTEEG)

This line is going to have to clean up its act defensively with Phaneuf out.

The trio started the season together and will be reassembled in games, depending on what coach Wilson sees. As a unit, the line is a combined minus-7.

Tyler Bozak, as a centre, is a minus-3 and Kris Versteeg, who was shifted to centre in Washington, is a minus-4.

The Leafs can't afford to have their top line in the red when their top defenceman is out. It will be a tricky proposition, though, because the team also needs that line to score, which means taking risks in certain areas of the ice.

4. MIKHAIL GRABOVSKI

He has got to score, plain and simple.

He's feeling nervous, now that he's goalless in 11 games. But he's the club's No. 2 centre and, in the big picture, the team can't have a lack of production down the middle.

Grabovski has done a nice job defensively for the most part. He's a plus-7, but a large part of that is because he's playing alongside Clarke MacArthur, who is off to a great start with seven goals.

But there are small details — turning the puck over, not competing hard enough in his own end and general nervousness with the puck when he's rushing it — that need to be cleaned up.

5. COACH RON WILSON

Wilson showed his smarts in Washington, shifting players around and placing Versteeg at centre on the top line to great effect when his team appeared ripe for a loss.

He's also simplifying the team game with more north-south passing, chip-ins, forechecking and net drive.

The Leafs still make some bad decisions with the puck, and that in part is a reflection of the puck movement system they play.

Wilson has plenty of team speed at his disposal. He's also fully cognizant of the fact his team needs to keep it simple with its top D-man missing from the lineup.

Anderson had 'great passion for the game'

Hall of Fame manager dies at age 76 He won World Series titles with Cincinnati and Detroit

Reds fans were taken aback when Sparky Anderson showed up in Cincinnati for his first day as a big league manager; an unknown taking over baseball's first professional team.

Sparky who?

Really?

By the time he was done, this man with the shock of white hair and schoolboy nickname would produce a mighty list of achievements that featured three World Series titles — including crowns in each league — and a Hall of Fame entry on his resumé.

Anderson, who directed the Big Red Machine to back-to-back championships and won another in Detroit, died Thursday from complications of dementia in Thousand Oaks, Calif. He was 76. A day earlier, his family said he'd been placed in hospice care.

"He was a good guy," former Tigers pitcher Jack Morris said, choking up over the news. "Baseball will have very few people like Sparky. He was a unique individual. He was a character with a great passion and love for the game."

He never tried to overshadow his teams, giving his stars great leeway while trying to stay in the background. At Anderson's request, there will be no funeral or memorial service.

Anderson was the first manager to win World Series titles in both leagues and the only manager to lead two franchises in career wins.

▶ In this 1995 photo, Tigers manager Sparky Anderson waves to fans prior to the start of the final game of the season.

His Reds teams featuring Pete Rose, Johnny Bench and Joe Morgan that won crowns in 1975 and 1976 rank among the most powerful of all time. Led by Kirk Gibson and Alan Trammell, Anderson won with the Tigers in 1984.

Anderson's win total of 2,194 was the third highest when he retired after the 1995 season, trailing only Connie Mack and John McGraw. He's still sixth on the career list — he won 863 games in nine years with the Reds and 1,331 in 17 seasons with the Tigers.

He refused to manage replacement players during baseball's labour dispute in spring training of 1995, angering owner Mike Ilitch. He resigned after a 60-win season, saying the franchise needed a new direction. He hoped to manage somewhere else, but when an offer never came along, he retired. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Merriman set to report to Bills on Friday

Coach Chan Gailey and the winless Buffalo Bills will have to wait a little longer before formally welcoming newly acquired outside linebacker Shawne Merriman.

And it'll be at least another week before the one-time feared pass-rusher will have a chance to make his debut.

A day after acquiring Merriman off of waivers, Gailey announced after practice Thursday that the player is tentatively scheduled to report to the team on Friday. Gailey also ruled him out for Buffalo's game against Chicago (4-3) at Toronto on Sunday.

Under NFL rules, players claimed on waivers have five days to report to their new teams. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pujols hopes to stay with the Cards

Albert Pujols hopes to negotiate a contract extension for beyond 2011 with the St. Louis Cardinals.

St. Louis exercised a $16-million US option for 2011 on Oct. 6 for the three-time NL MVP.

"I hope that before the season begins I get an extension," Pujols said during a news conference Thursday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cooking with Travis

Toronto Blue Jays outfielder showing his love for food on Twitter

Among the things you would have learned about Travis Snider if you followed him on Twitter is that the Toronto Blue Jays outfielder really, really loves food, especially meat.

Appropriately, the 22-year-old chose the handle Lunchboxhero45 when he relented on his long-standing refusal to join the social networking site and opened an account a week and a half ago, embracing the opportunity to engage fans in a new and different way.

"If you read my tweets the last couple of days we've gotten a pretty good dialogue going about some of our favourite meals, even had a few recipes going out there," Snider said in an interview Thursday. "I'm excited to continue those conversations and see if I can't pick up a couple of new recipes for some delicious off-season cooking."

For Blue Jays fans, Snider's willingness to mix with the masses offers a rare chance for them to interact with one of the team's players on a personal level.

Reliever Dirk Hayhurst, who missed the entire season after undergoing shoulder surgery, is the only other member of the big-league club on Twitter (he's the very entertaining TheGarfoose), while 2009 third-round draft pick Jake Marisnick (JakeMarisnick) also posts fairly regularly.

Tweetin' teams

- According to the website tweeting-athletes.com, the Minnesota Twins have the most players on Twitter with eight, followed by the Tampa Bay Rays at seven and Florida Marlins' at six.
- Stars that can be followed include CC Sabathia (CC-Sabathia), Carl Crawford (CarlCrawford_) and David Price (DAVIDprice14), although baseball players as a whole are nowhere near engaged as their NBA counterparts.

The Blue Jays have no formal policy to guide their players on Twitter although they do offer a reminder on representing the team well, and there should be no issues on that front with Snider.

Dubbed "The Franchise" as he was quickly working his way through the organization, Snider is a solid citizen who isn't apt to rock the boat.

"For me the biggest thing is opening communication with the fans, for them to get a chance to see another side of my personality," he said. "During the season through interviews we do with the media, everything revolves around baseball. (Through Twitter) I can keep an open forum with them and keep them informed kind of on what goes on in our off-season."

SCOTT RUSSELL

HOCKEY'S HALL OF FAME PIONEER

Each year the Hockey Hall of Fame inducts two kinds of people — players and builders.

On Monday, as two women are welcomed, Angela James of Canada and American Cammi Granato, the Old Boys club will recognize pioneers of the game.

James warrants the closest look.

The winner of four world championships, including the first in 1990 when she scored 11 goals in five games and was a tournament all-star, James revelled in her life as a player.

"It meant the world to me," she said of that inaugural world championship in Ottawa. "We never had anything like it prior to that. All I knew how to do was play hockey and that's all I wanted to do."

James grew up in Toronto's Flemingdon Park where drugs and crime were rampant. She came from a poor family with a single mom, Donna Baratto, who sacrificed everything to give her daughter a chance.

VINCE TALOTTA/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ Angela James

"We didn't have a car or a lot of money or anything like that," she said. "But we did have a ton of love in our house. My mom never let the children go without."

James was a big, tough, player who scored at will. She dominated for a generation playing for the Toronto Aeros and was feared by her opponents.

But James was left off the Canadian roster for the Nagano Olympics where women's hockey made its debut. A personality conflict with head coach Shannon Miller spelled the end of her Olympic dream.

"It was all I had worked for since the announcement in 1992 that women's hockey would be an Olympic sport," James said.

"Based on past performance, present performance and everything else I brought to that program, I should have been there."

Minus James, Canada went on to lose the gold medal to the United States, a team led by Cammi Granato.

Even the great American star realized it was James who was the trailblazer for women's hockey.

"We are pioneers, it's true," Granato said of the 1998 gold medallists from USA.

"But players like Angela James from Canada were around and dominating before my group ever arrived. They paved the way and we came in at the right time."

When James goes into the Hockey Hall, that pioneering spirit will be celebrated at long last.

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Listen to what friends and relatives have to tell you today, especially if they are giving you advice on your finances.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You've had your doubts about a relationship for some time but those doubts will be eased considerably today. There may be a few tears but they will most likely be tears of joy.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You cannot think of everything yourself and anyone who gets annoyed with you because you have overlooked some small detail must be reminded of that fact today. If they don't like your efforts they are free to link up with someone else.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 The urge to start something new is extra strong at the moment but because Venus, planet of emotional and material values, is moving retrograde you must make sure you will be able to finish what you begin.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Family issues are once again looming large and you will have to deal with a relative who does not seem to be making a very good job of controlling their emotions.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 2 You cannot control each and every situation you find yourself in and the sooner you accept that fact the sooner you will be able to move on from your current negative situation.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Venus, your ruler, is going through one of its retrograde phases, which means you should stop trying to call the shots and let others take the lead.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Are there forces outside our everyday reality that look over and protect us? You have often felt invisible hands guide your actions. Let them guide you in the right direction again today.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 You don't lack for strong opinions but you do sometimes lack for tact in expressing them. It's not so much what you say that matters as the way in which you say it. Say it with love.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Just be yourself and wonderful things will happen. You may spend more than you can afford on luxuries you don't need but in the greater scheme of thing that's a minor sin.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 You will get all the encouragement you need today. Friends and family and work colleagues will go out of their way to praise you and encourage you to make more of your talents.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 A relationship may be going through a tough time at the moment but stick with it. While Venus, planet of affection, continues to move retrograde others will act in strange ways. SALLY BROMPTON
